This document is intended for the use of Tom Swift researchers. It details items relating to Tom Swift stored at the New York Public Library, the Yale University Beinecke Rare Book and Manuscript Library, and the Georgetown University Lauinger library Special Collections Division. No copyright infringement is intended. The listings contained in this document are combed from the online listing of each library and are intended to simplify things for Tom Swift enthusiasts who wish to do further research into the respective archives of each library as well as bring about awareness of the contents available at each institution.

It should also be noted that there are probably more Tom Swift items available than are listed in this document. Many of the files stored at each institute may be listed under generic titles and, as such, may not come up when doing a search for Tom Swift. An actual physical examination of each box and folder would be necessary to determine what they contain and whether they are of interest to Tom Swift researchers.

Jame D. Keeline (<http://www.keeline.com>) has actually visited the Stratemeyer Syndicate Records at the New York Public Library and, if you ask nicely, may be able to tell you of other items of interest

For those of you wishing to have access to some of these documents but are unable to actually visit these institutions in person, many of these documents can be requested to be photocopied and mailed to you. The costs for photocopying can be expensive however, and vary from one library to the next. Some items may not be available for photocopying due to condition, copyright status, or other assorted reasons. It doesn't hurt to politely inquire however.

Collection number: W00-a18

Creator: Stratemeyer Syndicate

extent: 160 linear ft. (375 boxes)

Abstract: The Stratemeyer Syndicate was established in 1905 by Edward Stratemeyer, a successful author of juvenile literature. The Syndicate employed ghostwriters to produce such popular children's book series as Tom Swift, The Hardy Boys, The Bobbsey Twins and Nancy Drew. The records document the literary and business activity of Edward Stratemeyer, his family and colleagues from 1832 until the sale of the Stratemeyer Syndicate to Simon and Schuster, Inc. in 1984. The records include original manuscripts, editorial notes and correspondence, business and administrative files, promotional material, photographs, musical scores and artwork. They are an important resource for the study of American popular culture, children's literature and the history of publishing.

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE FILM COLLECTION

The collection consists of files from the liaison office of the Defense Department dealing with the film and television industry, including hundreds of scripts submitted to DOD in hopes of gaining official cooperation (loan of war material, primarily) or acceptance for work contracted out, together with relevant correspondence and internal DOD memoranda concerning action taken on specific requests. While the military-film industry connection is interesting, the eventual primary value of the collection will be in the many hundreds of film and television scripts themselves, which offer a detailed insight into the way Hollywood and the television industry have dealt with military themes and subjects over an extended time period.
